

Curious about NES Health bioenergetic wellness scans?

The images below are just a sample of what a bioenergetic wellness scan can show you about what is going on inside of your body.

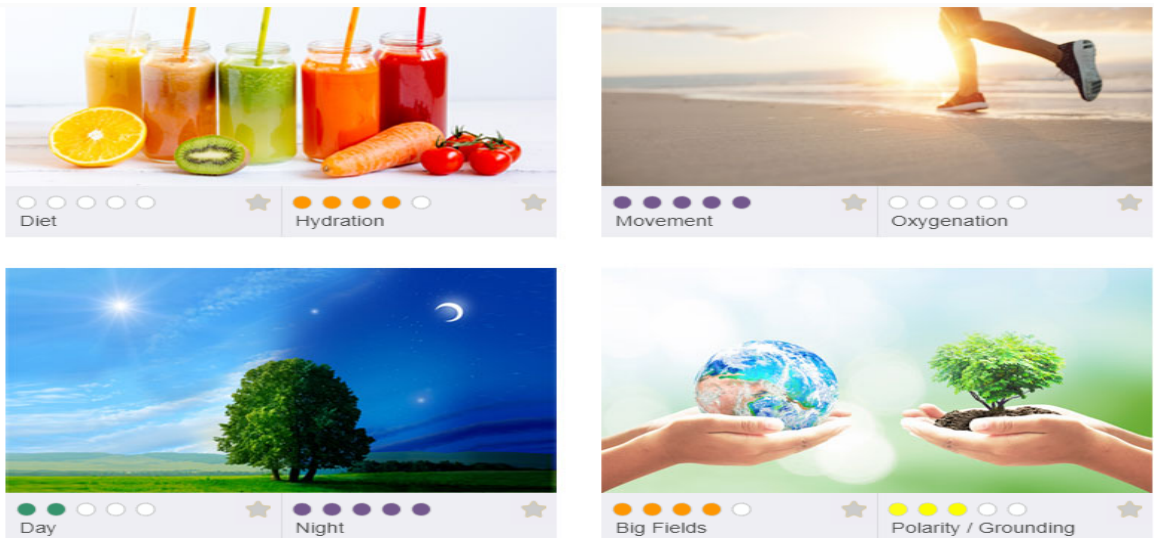

The scan priority colors (shown below) indicate how much of a priority a particular item on the scan is given. Purple, or the highest priority represents a lot of blocked or distorted energy/information, white represents little or no blockage or distortion, and therefore is a low priority. The other colors fall in between white and purple and their priorities follow accordingly, starting from left to right.

Looking at the sample/partial scan below, you can see that this person has been given the 2nd to the highest priority for her ET0-CNS-Central Nervous System, indicated by the orange color on the scan. The ET0 is the infoceutical that would help unblock energy or correct the distorted information in her CNS. What are infoceuticals? Watch the videos on this website to find out! www.yourlife-inspired.com

Below is another part of the scan that can show how well your diet is or how well you may or may not be absorbing the nutrients from your food. The high priority (purple) shown on the “night” image can be an indicator of lack of sleep, disturbed sleep, sleeping outside of the circadian rhythm.

The samples shown here are only a fraction of the information that will be made available to you about your NES Health body field scan. Individuals use this information along with the infoceuticals to monitor their changes and progress, this information can also be used to monitor the body for progress or changes made, following their own regimen/program.